Powell waited until nearly o'clock in the morning, but his fare had not returned. Then he left. Lewis then owed him $19. His bill when he left the taxi was not more than $5. The news of the suicide of Lewis was a great shock to the three Kyle sisters, who, though grief-stricken, still refused to believe Lewis had killed Mazie Colbert. The youngest sister, Mabel, was nearly prostrated. Their father, an invalid, has not yet heard of the girls' connection Soon after she reached home, she said, Lewis telephoned to her in great agitation, and told her he read the story and wanted her to believe that he had nothing to do with the murder.

"He called up again on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, according to appointment," she said, "and that is the last I believe we heard from him. I am positive now that the person or persons who telephoned to us this afternoon three times were not Mr. Lewis. The voices did not sound like

We were introduced to him properly, and as we found he was of a family of respectability and wealth, and conducted himself as a gentleman, we had no reason to doubt him. Telephoned Last Night. Lewis was in telephonic communi cation with the Misses Ethel and Mabel Kyle as late as 6 o'clock last even-ing. Frequently during the last few days the sisters had talked to him over the phone, and urged him, if he were innocent of any wrongdoing, as he asserted, to come forward and tell reverything to the police.

The police took up the hunt for Lewis when they found that Powell had taken Lewis and the Kyle sisters to their Germantown house on Thursday night and then had driven Lewis to the Wilton.

Lewis told one of the sisters yesterday that he had placed the matter in the hands of a lawyer, and that he would soon see the police and prove an alibi. This information was furnished by three Kyle sisters who made every effort to defend Lewis and that he could not possibly have had any connection with the murder. They said that he had been with them every evening after the murder, and gave an account of his movements each night from Thursday to Sunday, inclusive,

"I do not believe the story of tha

And I know that if Mr. Lewis had had anything to do with this horrible affair that he could not have come to see us and taken us out every night from Thursday to Sunday without showing some agitation or betraying something suspi-cious in his manner."

Dramatic Death

Lewis' death was dramatic. Early vesterday afternoon a "flier" was issued for him here, on the technical charge of beating Powell out of his $19 fare. Late last night detectives trailed him to his fashionable apartment in Atlantic City. As they entered he ran into the bath roon locked the door, and, lying in the tub, shot himself with a new rifle through the temple. Powell identified Lewis' clothes were terribly mussed, and he wore a shirt of cheap make—a direct contrast to the neat society man of several years ago.

Lewis had removed his coat. He was attired in a blue striped shirt, black trousers, and black shoes. There was little blood save a his temple, where the bullet had penetrated. His fingers showed several scratches, as if he had been in a struggle with some one. There were blood marks on nearly all the fingers of one hand. A dried blood-soaked handkerchief was found in Lewis' back pocket which the police believe definitely links him with the murder. Experts stated that stains were old, and the disagreeable odor also convinced the detectives that it had not been used re-

A towel was found pinned over the transom of his bedroom door. On the bureau was a box of cartridges and an extra cartridge lay on a ledge within his easy reach in the bathroom. Lewis frequently visited this city and had the reputation here of being a "high flyer." Four years ago last summer, his family occupied a house in States avenue and the son resided with them.

According to the occupants at States Villa, Lewis arrived at the house at 10 o'clock Wednesday night.

Lewis was careful to destroy all means of identification, and it could be readily seen that the act had been carefully planned beforehand. There were no letters, notes, or papers in his apartment.

On the bureau were several copies of the day's Philadelphia, Atlantic City; and New York newspapers. One contained the flaring headlines across the front page, "Girl May Solve Model Mystery." Underneath this was a large two-column picture of Grace Roberts.

I had tried so many different kinds of medicine that I was completely discouraged of ever finding anything that would relieve me, as none of them did me the least good. I had heard so much about your Plant Juice that I finally decided, as a last resort, to try it. I can now sleep well, eat my food and digest it, am not nervous or dizzy, and feel that life is worth living once more, I am glad to endorse Plant Juice."

Such words as these and those of many others which have been printed have wide influence, for they come from men of standing and integrity, who have given Plant Juice a fair trial and have been greatly benefited.
